BALLY AT SPEARVILLE.

The Heavens Ablaze With Republic-can Fire! Explosion of Applause!

Hon. J. W. Ady, of Newton, having been advertised to speak at Spearville on Tuesday last was granted the compliment of the largest Republican meeting ever held in that thrifty and well-ordered village. The day being pleasant as are all Kansas October days, people had nothing to fear from the weather and the meeting was, in consequence, quite up to general expectation in point numbers. An early freight train with an accommodation attachment and an accommodating conductor brought from Dodge the first arrivals, among whom were several bright and interesting young ladies, Miss Dollie Martin, Miss Carrie Markley, and Miss Eva Hinkle adding grace and beauty to the dignity of the delegation. Soon well loaded teams, carriages and buggies and mounted horsemen and women joined the gay and lively throng. Cheerful greetings, good health, good spirits, good horses, good clothes and good vehicles gave the first lie direct to the calamity howlers. The unused Central hotel had been opened, cleaned and warmed, and this furnished a temporary stopping place for the populace. A good delegation from Bucklin brought Miss Baird, our candidate for superintendent of schools, Bellefont was represented in the thronging guests by Major Cline and his many personal followers. But the largest and most enthusiastic delegation was from the State Soldiers' Home led by commandant Sweeney, and kept well in line by Capt. G. W. Barlow. When the noon train arrived from the east it brought the grand oratorical magnet that had drawn this multitude together—"Joe" Ady—accompanied by "Tim" McCarthy, the eloquent Irish soldier and old soldier's earnest advocate. With them came the "Coyotes" of Larned, a male glee club, and the "East End Brass Band", led by Prof. Beck, of Offerle. The band takes its name from having been organized principally by young men living at the east end of the county. This band was a most able auxiliary to the chief features of the meeting and vividly enlivened its proceedings. The ladies of Spearville and neighborhood had been all the morning industriously and somewhat mysteriously busy in the inner courts of the tabernacle. At one o'clock the proper signal having been given, the outer doors were thrown open and there burst upon the astonished vision of those unaccustomed to Spearville hospitality, such a display of "creature comforts" as would have turned the whole people's party green with jealous envy. Stacks of bread, such as only Kansas flour and Kansas housewives can make, mountains of roast fowl reeking with richness of gleanings of Kansas harvest fields, monuments of mouth-melting, cake, vegetables, relishes and condiments, while over and through all, steaming coffee-pots diffused the exhilarating aroma of the beneficent "bean of Yemen." Eight long tables, dressed out with spotless napery and furnished with ware and hardware, not to mention cutlery, filled the large dining hall of the old hotel. When the chief matron gave the word of command all seats were quickly filled and so were the sitters. The process was repeated until all were satisfied.

Procession was then formed, and following the lead of the East End Band marched to the large stone school house which had been fixed up with temporary seats for the comfort of the audience. Mr. Stewart was called to preside and immediately presented the Coyote Glee club who favored the audience with one of their inimitable songs which was emphasized by a storm of applause, only assuaged by an encore performance which evoked a laudatory cyclone. The chair then introduced Mr. Ady, which was the signal for another outburst that shook the building "from turret to foundation stone."

Mr. Ady opened by saying that seven weeks ago he began his work in this campaign by addressing crowded houses. Now he was speaking to crowded towns. The interest was growing and prospects for an old-time Republican victory were most cheering. He was proud at being able to say, truthfully, that he was a resident of a county (Harvey), that never had elected to office a calamity howler and never would. On account of the base slanders and calumnies originating here, the seventh congressional district of Kansas was being more anxiously watched in this campaign by all the world outside than any congressional district in the United States, to see if she would simply submit to be spit upon by her misrepresentative in congress or would arise in her majesty and might wipe the foul slanderer off the political face of the earth. Illustrative of our national greatness he related the incident of a dinner party to Paris composed of good loyal Americans which concluded by competitive toast-making in honor of their country. The first proposed the United States of America bounded on the north by Mexico, on the south by the Gulf of Mexico, on the east by the Atlantic and on the west by the Pacific Ocean. He was followed by a gentleman who gave as his toast "The United States of the American Republic! Bounded on the north by the north pole, on the south by the Antarctic ocean, on the east by the original orient and on the west by the setting sun. Then the man from Kansas arose and proposed America! Bounded on the north by the aurora borealis, on the south by the precession of the equinoxes, on the east by primordial chaos and on the west by the day of judgment!

Patriotism, like charity, begins at home—in the home. Thus the family, in its most important aspect, is the nursery of patriotic devotion. Children are hostages given by the parent to the nation as pledges for his good behavior. No nation is great, in a civilized sense, where the family is not the second if not the first object of worship. Kansas makes herself great by placing husband and wife in the scale of justice on an even and equal balance. Washington said, "No man should hold an important office who is not the father of a family, as he only can realize the holy tie that should bind our country to the hearts of her citizens."

On the subject of the relation of wages to labor Mr. Ady read from democratic commissioner Peck's report to the democratic governor of New York, the facts and figures collected, which show conclusively that under protection, labor receives higher wages than under any other system of trade. He quoted Prince Bismark's conclusion on the same subject that the United States was the most favorable land on earth for the laborer, tracing this fact to our system of protection and recommended Germany to follow our example and she, having done so, found the wages of her laborers increased in one year 30 per cent. The speaker showed by quotations from market reports that under Republican protection all goods were cheaper to the consumer year by year than formerly, especially woollens, and as Mr. Cleveland had said that the chief concern of the laboring man was a "cheap coat," if he would let the protecting Republicans alone Grover would get his cheap coat and if he didn't happen to live long enough that "Little Ruth" would eventually get a cheap petticoat anyhow.

He referred to the condition of Ireland before the fatal union of 1800. Her fields were gardens, her homes temples of peace and plenty, her factories marble palaces, her laborers princes. But "how is old Ireland and how does she stand" now. In ten years after being joined by fraud and force to free-trade England her population fell off 33 per cent, and nearly the same ratio of decrease has been going on ever since, while her laborers who remained were too poor to keep a dog or cat.

On the question of constitutionality, lately raised by some of our opponents, he cited the third act of the very first congress of the United States of America, which declares explicitly and emphatically for the protection of American labor against that of foreign nations, and quoted Judge Story's commentaries upon the then new constitution of the United States wherein special reference is made to this very protection act of congress and it is there decided to be essentially constitutional under the common law of nations. No one ever questioned Joseph Story's democracy nor his judicial opinions. These populists would next be disputing the multiplicity table.

No speaker in any campaign ever received more marked attention and no address of any nature ever more exactly fitted every aspect of the case.

The reporter deploras the impossibility of doing justice to the speaker and to his address. No reporter, nor even stenographer could reproduce the least shadow of the impressive manner of its delivery, nor if its effect upon the audience.

Hon. Tim McCarthy, being loudly called for, spoke a few words to the old soldiers. He feelingly implored them to stand up for Kansas as they stood up for the union in '61.

One of the grand features of the occasion was the demand for Republican badges by some who acted with the people's party in the last campaign and requested their names inscribed upon the roll of honor.

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 19th, '92.—To all offices: You are authorized to emphatically deny the absurd rumor that the Western Union has absorbed, or is going to absorb this company. It was started for stock jobbing purposes and we shall probably be called upon periodically to deny similar rumors. The Postal Telegraph-Cable company is here to stay, and we hope for a continuance of the patronage with which our friends have favored us, promising in the future, as in the past, to do our best to please them.

Obituary

Died at her home in this city, October 19th, 1892, Mrs. Sarah Ellen Ralston, wife of our esteemed townsman, R. F. Hammond.

Mrs. Hammond was born in Armstrong county, Pennsylvania, May 11th, 1849. She moved with her parents to Knox county, Illinois, in 1854, where she was married to R. F. Hammond, who during her long years of suffering, patiently ministered at her bedside, and generously sacrificed all else for her comfort. They were married on New Year's Day of 1867, and three years after Mrs. Hammond developed the incurable form of scrofula, from which for 22 years, she was a sufferer and endured a lingering death with christian faith and heroism. In 1874 they moved to Iowa, and from there in 1884 to Kansas. At an early period of her life, Mrs. Hammond accepted the teachings of Jesus, and became one of his most ardent disciples. In the storm of physical agony that swept over her life, she ever realized that the divine arm was underneath her, and she distinctly heard the voice of the Redeemer say—"Peace be still". She endured her trials and bore her burden for Jesus' sake, and illustrated to her friends, the power there is in a child-like faith in God. The services in her memory were held at the First Presbyterian church, and were conducted by Rev. S. E. Buser. The interment was made in the G. A. R. cemetery. The entire community aimed to express to Mr. Hammond and his family the sympathy they felt, and the offering of the hope-reviving flowers laid on her casket with tearful appreciation of her worth, was very beautiful and suggestive. A large detail of soldiers from the Home and the city, representing Lewis Post G. A. R. of which Mr. Hammond is the Commander, attended the funeral in a body, and assisted their comrades in this the severest battle of his life.

The text taken for her funeral sermon was Matthew 11, 28 and 29:—"Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you and learn of me, and ye shall find rest unto your souls". The music was provided by Mr. T. C. Owen and his accomplished daughter Miss Anna. The lesson of her faith and patience was developed by the minister, and the sweet word "Come" of the text, seemed to be uttered by her to all her friends here below, and every one realized the blessedness of that rest that remains to the people of God. The storm is over, the harbor of heaven reached, and the welcome words heard, "Enter into the joy of thy Lord".

"And then O feeble, faltering feet! Methinks 'twill be so wondrous sweet To tread the pavement's golden gleam, And rest beneath the crystal stream, In that dear city, where all tears Are wiped away, and all our fears And all our weary wanderings cease, There shall you rest, tired feet in peace."
